SEEDS FOR FALL -- AUGUST, 1951

General conditions can't be considered as settled so we won't try to guess seed prices for the coming season. However, Government supports on legumes and grasses are about the same as last year and seed prospects and carry-over are better than they were a year ago. Most folks feel price averages could be lower than they were in 1950-51.

SEED GRAINS

WHEAT - Four of the best and most widely used soft red winter wheat varieties are quoted. Some prefer one to the other but all are high producers, generally stiff strawed and widely adapted.

Seneca is a new variety offered for the first time this year. It is closely related to Thorne, has given slightly higher yields and averaged between one to two pounds higher test weight. Stiff-strawed and is expected to replace Thorne in popularity.

Thorne is red chaffed, smooth, very stiff-strawed, high yielding and the most popular variety. Butler is bearded, equally as stiff-strawed and high yielding; is less susceptible to scab damage, a little more winter hardy and slightly higher in test. Vigo is a smooth variety noted for winter hardiness and high test weight per bushel but best suited to western Ohio. Average yield and straw stiffness is slightly under Thorne and Butler in Ohio but test weight generally is higher.

RYE - Rosen type rye is widely used for both grain production and plow under purposes. Balbo is more leafy and under most conditions better suited for early fall and spring pasture. Demand for Balbo is increasing and supplies of seed that can be guaranteed true to variety are limited.

BARLEY - Ohio No. 1 barley is bearded, high yielding and has proven superior to others under Ohio conditions. Wong is considered as beardless and is stiffer strawed than other varieties. Seeding should be about two weeks ahead of wheat. Winter oats are not as hardy as wheat, rye or barley and are not recommended except where weather conditions are generally mild.

GRASSES

Timothy and Brôme Grass, both of which are used extensively in fall seedings, are lower in price than last spring. There is a larger carry-over of seed than a year ago and prospects are for a normal seed harvest. Bluegrass, orchard grass, red top and most of the farm grasses are quoted lower than last season.

All seed wheat and barley offered by SCOTTS is Ceresan treated, ready to sow. Most seeds are ready for prompt shipment with freight paid on orders of 200 pounds or more and safe delivery is guaranteed. Send in your order now.

Sincerely,

THE SCOTT FARM SEED CO.
